Not illustrated. 1894 Excerpt: . devotion almost became a by-word amongst a few of the wits, who harmonized their life of doing nothing by inventing a creed of believing nothing. The event threw such a disturbing element into my thoughts that this entry of my diary is almost as soberly real as if Dick himself had written it. However, the Rev. John Josiah came to lunch, and, as Dick was away, 1 asked questions and allowed him to tell me of the oddities of the island. He had come up to attend some annual gathering and shake off the dust of Cable. I enquired after old friends there in detail, and smiled at the smart sketches which Mr. Josiah drew of their foibles. I then told him of the horrors of Paradise Street, and asked him how he accounted for such degradation. He answered: There are many causes at work, and some of them are so secret that to name them would provoke a smile. For instance, most of the nation has been corrupted by a fetish worship of the Bible, which prevents correct thinking and creates that false sentiment mistaken for morality. Sentimental prejudice and sham morals, when backed up by power and public opinion, are a pestilence. Is there any explanation of this blind reverence for the Bible. Yes. It is the mature superstition of paganism transferred to the pious records of different ages. It is very strange that this book is made up of fragments badly translated,...
