Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Starting in January 2004, the NESC has received several communications from knowledgeable technical experts at NASA expressing shared concerns (mainly at the Langley Research Center (LaRC) and Ames Research Center (ARC)) about Huygens mission success. It was suggested that NASA become more technically involved directly in the analysis of Huygens entry, descent and landing (EDL) focusing on the following primary concerns: 1. The parachute deployment trigger performance and the resultant effects on the operation of the parachute system, and 2. The determination of the radiative heating environment at Titan by ESA and the corresponding thermal protection system (TPS) response. A NESC Team was formed and tasked to provide an independent assessment of these concerns. Tasks required for this independent assessment included: 1. Development of an aerodynamics database for the entry configuration. 2. Development of an aerodynamic database for the probe under each of the three parachutes. 3. Development of an opening loads model for each of the three parachutes. 4. Development of detailed aerothermal environments. These environments were comprised of the convective (laminar and turbulent) and radiative heat...
